All locations are approximate, dotted where buried under young deposits.
Sources of data:
Crowell (1968)
Szatai (1961)
L.A. Co. Engr. Section (1965)
Konigsberg (1967)
Nickell (1928)
Simpson (1932)
Dibblee (1961)
This is the only segment of the Clearwater fault as mapped by Nickell (1928) that differs from the fault traces shown by others (Nickell mapped all of this quadrangle and the west half of Sleepy Valley quad).
L.A. Co. Eng. Sect. documents displaced Qt. here; also field checked in this area
KONIGSBERG
DIBBLEE
Dibblee (1961) shows late Q deposits (older alluvium) not displaced here.
This trace is common only to Simpson (1932); he does, however, also show fault traces in approximately the same locations as Konigsberg (1967) in the eastern part of the quad, and Dibblee (1961) in the western part of the quad.
